

Pipeline support sequential builds where one person submits to master it will start the build and testing. If another person submits to master before the other finishes it is just added to a queue. One update to master needs to be tested and either rejected or approved before the next can be tested.